

Fellows Position(s) in Public Health Law and Policy

The Public Health Law and Policy Program at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, Arizona State University, is seeking qualified candidates for one or more Fellows positions in public health law and policy. The candidate(s) will work full-time with a collaborative team of faculty, fellows, and students at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law on national public health law and policy projects with funding from governmental and private sector foundations. These positions are for one year with the possibility of additional time subject to funding and performance.

Candidates must have their JD degree from an accredited law school, and should have exceptional academic credentials. Candidates who have experience working in the field of public health, or who have a Masters of Public Health or Masters of Law (with a health concentration) from accredited schools of public health or law, may be preferred. Additional considerations include: strong scholarly or research interests; prior course work in public health law, ethics, and policy; organizational and management skills; public speaking skills; and the capacity to work closely with mentors, staff, legal and public health practitioners, and other partners.

Applications must be received by August 1, 2010, and should include: (1) a cover letter that states the candidate's research interests and experience; (2) current resume or C.V.; (3) writing sample[s] written solely by the candidate; and (4) contact data for 2-3 professional references. Some candidates may also be asked to provide official academic transcripts or other data. Applicants must be prepared to begin on or about October 1, 2010. Salary and benefits through the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law will be based on institutional guidelines for the position as well as the candidate(s)' qualifications and experience. To apply, please email or mail the above-requested information to:
